The Grammy Museum is an interactive space where all aspects of music are experienced, explored and celebrated. From examining pivotal moments in music history to telling the stories of how sound has shaped our collective identity and facilitated cultural understanding, we aim to break down the barrier between artist and audience, and unveil the mutually informative relationship they share. By deconstructing the creative process, considering music makers through a broader social lens and placing the visitor in the creator role, our thought-provoking exhibits and interactives showcase the storied legacy of Music – the thread that connects us.
